REUTERS/JEFFERIES CRB INDEX ANNOUNCES COMPOSITION ADJUSTMENT

NEW YORK, June 29, 2006 - The Oversight Committee of the Reuters/Jefferies CRB Index ("RJ/CRB Index") today announced an upcoming change to the designated contract for unleaded gas for purposes of calculating the RJ/CRB Index. The new designated contract will be the Reformulated Gasoline Blendstock for Oxygen Blending ("RB") futures contract traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange ("NYMEX"). The RB futures contract replaces the previously designated New York Harbor Unleaded Gasoline ("HU") futures contract, also traded on the NYMEX.

The decision by the Oversight Committee comes in response to announced plans by the NYMEX to discontinue listing its HU futures contract beyond January 2007. The transition between unleaded gas contracts will occur as part of the regularly scheduled roll of futures contracts, described in the RJ/CRB Calculation Supplement, during the first four business days in September 2006.

"This amendment will allow the Index to continue to serve as a key indicator for commodity markets, just as it has done for nearly half a century," said Tom Gros, EVP and Global Head of New Markets, Commodities & Energy at Reuters.

For the purposes of calculating RJ/CRB Index values, the RB contract will be treated as a continuation of the HU futures series, which has been used in calculating the RJ/CRB Index. November 2006 will be the first RB future contract month included in the calculation of the RJ/CRB Index and October 2006 will be the last HU future contract month included in the calculation of the RJ/CRB Index.

About the Reuters/Jefferies CRB Index

For nearly 50 years, the Reuters/Jefferies CRB Index (“RJ/CRB Index”) has served as a widely recognized measure of global commodities markets. The Reuters/Jefferies CRB Index is used by members of the academic and investment communities along with central banks, government agencies and prominent non-governmental organizations as the benchmark for price levels and movements within the commodities markets. As a benchmark, the RJ/CRB Index is designed to provide timely and accurate representation of a long-only, broadly-diversified investment in commodities through a transparent and disciplined calculation methodology. The RJ/CRB Index is widely quoted in leading broadcast and print media sources and incorporated as a key component in financial research and pricing. Additionally, price levels for the Index are available live via numerous market data providers and websites.
